Comments and Alternate Proposal

Submitted to FERC on September 3, 2019

Michael Mabee, a private citizen, respectfully submits comments and an alternate proposal on FERC Docket No. AD19-18-000, Joint Staff White Paper on Notices of Penalty Pertaining to Violations of Critical Infrastructure Protection Reliability Standards. First of all, I commend the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) and the North American Electric Reliability Corporation (NERC) for proposing to seek more transparency in Notice of Penalty (NOP) filings. Such public transparency is critical to the security of the bulk power system as it provides an incentive for companies to comply with mandatory Critical Infrastructure Protection (CIP) standards. It also provides the means for public, investor, Congressional and state scrutiny and evaluation of the violators and the regulatory system.

Introduction

“Publicity is justly commended as a remedy for social and industrial diseases. Sunlight is said to be the best of disinfectants; electric light the most efficient policeman.”

– Justice Louis D. Brandeis

Background and Public Interest in the Identities of CIP Violators

On February 28, 2018 NERC submitted a proposed Notice of Penalty to FERC on an “Unidentified Registered Entity” in Docket No. NP18-7-000. This entity was fined $2,700,000 for a massive cybersecurity breach that, according to NERC, posed a “serious or substantial risk” to the electric grid. This cybersecurity breach and the subsequent Notice of Penalty garnered much press attention.¹ Some of the press articles speculated that the “Unidentified Registered Entity” was actually PG&E Corp.² After numerous citizens intervened unsuccessfully in the docket, I filed a Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request for the identity of the violator.³ The press began to report on the issue of citizens demanding that the names of CIP violators be released.⁴ FERC initially denied my FOIA request, necessitating that I file an appeal. Finally, on August 24, 2018, FERC released the name of the CIP violator (PG&E Corp.) to me. This information was reported on my blog⁵ and in the press.⁶

This particular Notice of Penalty in Docket No. NP18-7-000 garnered a great deal of public comment as well as press coverage. This demonstrated that the identity of a CIP violator is a matter of legitimate public interest. It is important to note that to this day, the name of the violator in this docket is only available on my website and in the press articles. It has still not been released to FERC's public docket or on NERC's website. So even with names that are released under FOIA, a transparency issue remains.

After conducting extensive research, I determined that beginning on July 6, 2010, NERC began withholding the identities of the entities subject to regulatory action in Critical Infrastructure Protection (CIP) reliability standard Notices of Penalty submitted to FERC. (Prior to July 6, 2010, identities of CIP standards violators were disclosed by both NERC and FERC – see Exhibit A.) In fact, as of August 31, 2019 there have been a total of 255 FERC dockets involving almost 1,500 “Unidentified Registered Entities” or “UREs”, which is the industry euphemism for a CIP violator whose name is being withheld from the public.

I currently have FOIA requests filed for 253 out of these 255 dockets.⁷ Note that my FOIA requests do not include all of the “Find, Fix and Track” (FFT) and “Compliance Exemption” (CE) cases. These FFT and CE cases are very difficult for the public to find, analyze and also must be included in this transparency initiative. The release of names of “Unidentified Registered Entities” pursuant to my FOIA requests has garnered additional press interest.⁸ Upon information and belief, several other FOIA requests for Notices of Penalty cases were filed with FERC after I filed my initial FOIAs.⁹ On February 5, 2019, I filed a petition for rulemaking to require the disclosure of the names of regulatory violators.¹⁰ The Commission has not docketed my petition.

The Commission discussed this transparency issue at the June 27, 2019 FERC Reliability Technical Conference, and FERC was questioned on the transparency issue by the House Subcommittee on Energy on July 12, 2019.¹¹ Finally, on August 27, 2019, the Commission published a “white paper” and opened this administrative docket for public comment on the issue of disclosing the names of CIP violators.

The White Paper Proposal

The white paper proposes the following disclosure on NOP cases going forward:

“This White Paper proposes a new approach in which NERC would submit CIP NOPs containing a public cover letter and a confidential attachment. The cover letter would publically disclose:

- (1) the name of the violator,*
- (2) the Reliability Standard(s) violated (but not the requirement or subrequirement violated), and*
- (3) the penalty amount.*

NERC would provide details on the nature of the violation, mitigation activity, and potential vulnerabilities to cyber systems in a confidential attachment.”¹²

While I applaud the staffs of FERC and NERC for moving forward to engage in a public discussion about disclosure of the identities of CIP violators, the above proposal does not give the public, investors, Congress and other regulators the information needed to ensure that companies comply with their obligations to protect the critical infrastructure and to ensure that the regulatory system is working. Therefore, I propose an alternative approach.

Alternate Proposal

I have done a great deal of research, analysis and public dissemination of information about CIP violators and therefore believe I am well qualified to propose an alternate approach that will satisfy the public interest as well as protect the security interest of the critical infrastructure. In fact, you will note from my work that my primary interest and goal is the security of the electric grid.¹³

The White Paper proposal does not contain enough public information to allow for public, investor, Congressional and state scrutiny and evaluation of the violators and the regulatory system – activities that are critical to the security of the bulk power system.

I propose that the information required by the public, investors, Congress and state regulators consists of:

1. All information fields contained in the present NERC “Searchable NOP Spreadsheet”¹⁴ including the name of the entity disclosed in the “Registered Entity” field.
2. Date violation discovered.
3. Duration of violation
4. How violation was discovered (e.g., self-report, audit, etc.)
5. A plain English (non-technical) description of each violation.
6. Aggravating and mitigating factors in penalty assessment
7. Settlement agreement

Below is a more detailed description of each data point and the reason it is needed by the public, investors, Congress and state regulators.

1. All information fields contained in the present NERC “Searchable NOP Spreadsheet” including the name of the entity disclosed in the “Registered Entity” field.
 - a. “Date”: This is the date the NOP was filed with FERC. This information is necessary to determine when a NOP was filed, as well as for various statistical calculations. For example, examining trends of the dates the matters are filed with FERC with the date the violations were discovered and the dates the violations are mitigated provides information on the effectiveness of the regulatory system.

¹³ See <https://michaelmabee.info/> (accessed August 31, 2019).

¹⁴ Exhibit A is adapted from NERC’s “Searchable NOP Spreadsheet” <https://www.nerc.com/pa/comp/CE/Pages/Enforcement-and-Mitigation.aspx> (Information downloaded on August 29, 2019). It lists all CIP violations from Notices of Penalty from June 4, 2008 through August 31, 2019. One column was removed (“Regulatory Authority”) to allow the data to fit the width of the page.

- b. “Regulatory Authority”: This field is not necessary unless there is a situation where there could be a regulatory authority other than FERC.
- c. “Regulatory Filing ID”: This is the FERC “Docket Number” which is necessary in order to identify a case and to find documents related to the violation on FERC’s public system.
- d. “Region”: This is necessary in order to do statistical analysis based on geographic location. It is also necessary to do comparison and analysis of performance between regions. As an example, using this field, I was able to determine that there were at least four undisclosed violations of vegetation management standards for transmission lines in the Western Interconnection – the same region where over 86 deaths occurred in the “Camp Fire” – the deadliest and most destructive wildfire in California history.¹⁵ This is the same region where a “regulated entity” (PG&E) has significant liability for wildfires. These violations were mixed in with CIP violations and therefore were not disclosed to the public – despite the significant public interest in the fires and the possible involvement and liability of utility companies in that region.
- e. “Registered Entity”: The name of the regulatory violator. This is necessary so the public, investors, Congress and other regulators can see which entities are violating CIP regulations and if there are repeat violators. This information is necessary for any public follow up with Congress or other regulators. Other regulatory agencies need this information as many BPS entities also fall under regulation by state Public Utilities Commissions, the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission and other federal, state and local authorities.
- f. “NCR ID (NERC Compliance Registry Identifier)”: This information is useful in relational databases as a database key (since the names of entities may not be spelled the exact same way in every violation). I note that this information is already available on NERC's public website.¹⁶

- g. "Total Penalty ($) (The total penalty amount represents an aggregate amount for the filing; it does not represent an amount per violation.)": This is necessary so that the public, investors and Congress can understand the enforcement of CIP standards and also to evaluate the effectiveness of the enforcement regime.
- h. "SA, NOCV, ACP, SNOP or OMNI": The disposition of the violation is noted here and this information is necessary so that the public, investors and Congress can understand the enforcement of CIP standards and also to evaluate the effectiveness of the enforcement regime.
- i. "NERC Violation ID": This information is useful in relational databases as a database key since there can be multiple violations under each docket and often in data analysis, we will look at violations from multiple dockets. (e.g., to count how many violations of a particular standard or requirement were levied in a particular period, or in a particular region.)
- j. "Reliability Standard": This information is necessary in order for the public, investors, Congress and other authorities to know what general CIP violations are taking place. This field alone does not give the public sufficient information on the violation. Below is a listing of the current enforceable CIP "Reliability Standard[s]".¹⁷ The whitepaper proposes giving only "the Reliability Standard(s) violated (but not the requirement or subrequirement violated)." However, as you can see from the below listing of current CIP standards and titles, these broad descriptions are not enough for the public to fully understand the regulatory action taken:
 - CIP-002-5.1a Cyber Security – BES Cyber System Categorization
 - CIP-003-6 Cyber Security – Security Management Controls

¹⁷ See: <https://www.nerc.com/pa/Stand/pages/cipstandards.aspx> (accessed August 31, 2019).

- CIP-004-6 Cyber Security – Personnel & Training
- CIP-005-5 Cyber Security – Electronic Security Perimeter(s)
- CIP-006-6 Cyber Security – Physical Security of BES Cyber Systems
- CIP-007-6 Cyber Security – System Security Management
- CIP-008-5 Cyber Security – Incident Reporting and Response Planning
- CIP-009-6 Cyber Security – Recovery Plans for BES Cyber Systems
- CIP-010-2 Cyber Security – Configuration Change Management and Vulnerability Assessments
- CIP-011-2 Cyber Security – Information Protection
- CIP-014-2 – Physical Security

k. “Req.”: The “Req.” field is the requirement of the standard. This added to the “Reliability Standard” field gives a slightly better description of the violation but does not give specific information that would be useful to an attacker. The white paper stated that the “the requirement or subrequirement violated” would not be released, but this must be reconsidered. For example, here is what a Physical Security Violation would look like with the requirements (“Req.”) added. As you can see, there is nothing here that would aid an attacker:

- “Reliability Standard” violated: CIP-014-2 Physical Security
- “Req.” violated: R1. Each Transmission Owner shall perform an initial risk assessment and subsequent risk assessments of its Transmission stations and Transmission substations (existing and planned to be in service within 24 months) that meet the criteria specified in Applicability Section 4.1.1. The initial and subsequent risk assessments shall consist of a transmission analysis or transmission analyses designed to identify the Transmission station(s) and Transmission substation(s) that if rendered inoperable or damaged could result in instability, uncontrolled separation, or Cascading within an Interconnection.

Even if we add in the “subrequirement violated” there still is not usable information here that would assist an attacker. We can do the same exercise for all the Reliability Standards, requirements and subrequirements. Moreover, it is important to point out that when the violations have been mitigated – as the vast majority are before the NOP is even issued – the Reliability Standard, requirement and subrequirement alone do not give an attacker any actionable information.

- l. “Violation Risk Factor (Lower, Medium, High)”: This is necessary for the public and others to understand the gravity of the violation. It is important to point out that when the violations have been mitigated – as the vast majority are before the NOP is even issued – the “Violation Risk Factor (Lower, Medium, High)” does not give an attacker any actionable information.
- m. “Risk Assessment (Minimal, Moderate, Serious)”: This is necessary for the public and others to understand the gravity of the violation. It is important to point out that when the violations have been mitigated – as the vast majority are before the NOP is even issued – the “Risk Assessment (Minimal, Moderate, Serious)” does not give an attacker any actionable information.
- n. “Mitigation Completion Date”: This is critical for use in statistical analysis. For example: The amount of time between the discovery of a violation and the “Mitigation Completion Date” is instructive both on the entity’s sense of urgency to fix the violation, but also the regulator’s sense of urgency to find and abate the violation. Also, the amount of time between the “Mitigation Completion Date” and the date the NOP was filed with FERC is instructive as to the functioning of the regulatory regime.
- o. “Notice of No Further Review Issued”: This is important because it indicates that FERC will not review the case and the NOP has become effective. It signals to the public that the regulatory action has been completed. As a note, it would be better for the public if this field contained the date of the FERC order (rather than a check mark). The date of the FERC order is publicly available elsewhere, but the public has to dig for each individual date.

2. Date violation discovered: This is critical for use in statistical analysis. For example, we can study the length of time between when a violation is discovered and the “Mitigation Completion Date.” Also, the amount of time between when violations are discovered and the NOP is filed with FERC.
3. Duration of violation: This is critical for the public, investors, Congress to understand the length of time they were at risk. It is important to point out that when the violations have been mitigated – as the vast majority are before the NOP is even issued – the “Duration of violation” does not give an attacker any actionable information.
4. How violation was discovered: (e.g., self-report, audit, etc.) This is important for the public and others to assess how well the companies and regulators are doing at locating violations. It is also important in understanding how the regulatory system is functioning.
5. A plain English (non-technical) description of each violation: I spoke with a well-respected journalist who pointed out it is helpful to journalists and the public for there to be a brief, non-technical explanation of the violation (e.g., what the company failed to do or what the violation was in general). Just the CIP standard and requirement are very broad and don’t give us even a basic appreciation of what occurred.
6. Aggravating and mitigating factors in penalty assessment: This is critical information for the public and others to appreciate how penalties are assessed. It is also necessary for the public to be able to evaluate the entity’s cooperation or lack of cooperation with the regulatory system.
7. Settlement agreement. It is critical for the public to know how these cases are resolved. For example, in some of the cases that were “settled,” the regulated entities were “uncooperative” (FERC Docket NP16-12-000) or “not fully transparent and forthcoming” (FERC Docket NP18-7-000). “Settling” with such bad actors raises many regulatory red flags and the public needs to analyze these FERC-approved transactions in more detail. Also, some entities do not admit to a violation in the settlement. While this is a common practice in settlements, the public must have the ability to scrutinize how regulators settle cases with the regulated community.

I should point out that all of the information above is presently available to the public with the exception of the name of the violator and the settlement agreement in cases prior to 2019.¹⁸ Merely adding the name of the violator is not going to suddenly make all this publicly available information Critical Electric Infrastructure Information (CEII).

In fact, making the above information available will enhance accountability and ultimately result in a more secure bulk power system as both companies and regulators will have the proper incentive to work harder on CIP standard compliance. And the public and Congress will be able to evaluate the performance of our regulatory system.

Therefore, I propose that this modified list of information be the default disclosure on every future NOP case – unless NERC can specifically show how one of these pieces of information in a particular case would endanger the bulk power system. When that showing can be made (and is examined and approved by the Commission), then that one piece of information might be withheld in that particular instance.

Based on my analysis of past cases, I do not anticipate that this would happen often, if at all.

FERC and NERC regulatory vigilance is needed

Culture change is hard and takes time.

The industry trade associations – and even NERC itself – has fought vehemently against the release of the names of CIP violators since I first raised the issue by intervening in Docket NP18-7-000 on April 15, 2018 and filing FOIA 2018-0075 on April 13, 2018. I am encouraged that NERC now appears to realize that the transparency balance needs to be reexamined and is working with FERC through participation in this whitepaper to find a way forward.

¹⁸ In 2019, NERC started making a redacted version of the settlement agreements available.

However, the regulated industry is represented by trade associations who have not only fought against increased transparency, but threatened a regulatory mutiny if FERC begins to release the names of CIP violators.

The American Public Power Association (APPA), the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association (NRECA) and the Edison Electric Institute (EEI)¹⁹ have thus far opposed any increased transparency. In a Motion to Intervene in Docket NP19-4-000, the Trade Associations threaten that if the Commission (FERC) releases the names of the regulatory violators, the industry may stop cooperating with regulators by “reconsidering” whether to self-report violations.²⁰ I filed reply comments on May 9, 2019 addressing the regulatory threat and numerous misrepresentations, including FERC’s alleged approval of the coverup of CIP violators names as well as misleading interpretations of Commission orders.²¹

I’m not concerned that the trade associators will oppose transparency by filing opposition in this docket – considering diverse opinions on the transparency issue is purportedly what this docket is all about. What concerns me is that the industry may try to subvert transparency by abusing NERC and FERC NOP procedures. For example, we see from Exhibit A and the underlying NOPs that mitigation is generally completed within reasonable timeframes. However, companies could, for example, drag out their mitigation plan for a long period of time – even years – in an effort to delay their name being exposed as a CIP violator.

FERC and NERC must remain vigilant – especially in the next few years – for attempts by the industry to avoid the name disclosure that they vehemently oppose.

¹⁹ Edison Electric Institute’s members include the government of the People’s Republic of China – one of the governments that the U.S. has accused of penetrating the electric grid in cyberattacks. Existing NOP Cases

FERC needs to disclose the names of the violators in the past NOP cases – almost all of which have been mitigated and the NOPs have become effective by FERC order. I have highlighted the “Mitigation Completion Date” in Exhibit A, which is a listing of all CIP violations from June 4, 2008 through August 29, 2019. When you look at the “Mitigation Completion Date” column and the “Notice of No Further Review Issued”²² column, it appears that ALL NOPs up through December 2018 and many of the 2019 NOPs have been mitigated.²³

Continuing to withhold the names of the violators in these already mitigated cases is making it appear more and more that there is something here to hide. Perhaps there is. Let’s get it all out in the open and deal with it. What I am convinced is not hiding in all these past mitigated and closed NOPs is CEII if merely the names of the violators are released.

Respectfully submitted by:

Michael Mabee

²² The “Notice of No Further Review Issued” column represents the issuance of the FERC order that the Commission will not review the NOP on their own motion.

²³ I note that several older dockets list “TBD” as the mitigation date, however, FERC has issued a final order, so I assume these are administrative errors in not being updated. These dockets are: NP15-32-000, NP14-40-000, NP14-40-000, NP14-40-000, NP13-45-000, NP13-45-000.
